

SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO SAY AND THAT'S OK.
SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO SAY AND THAT'S OK.

SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO

SAY AND THAT'S OKAY

SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING

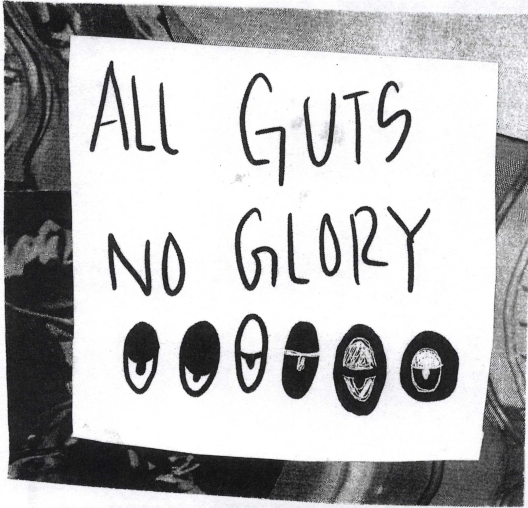

TO SAY AND THAT'S OK.

SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO SAY AND THAT'S OKAY.
SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO SAY AND THAT'S OKAY.
SOMETIMES YOU HAVE NOTHING TO SAY AND THAT'S OKAY.

TO EVERY ASSHOLE:

TURN YR BRIGHTS OFF!!!

from the archives of mbf, aka i started this about two weeks before i finished it.

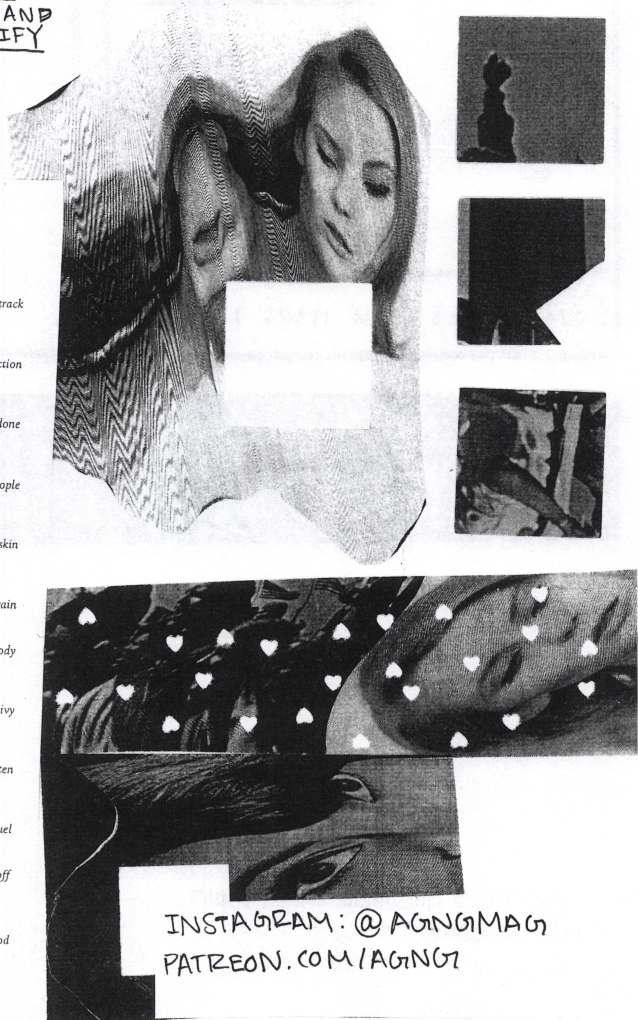

I cannot believe I just had to sit at a red light trying to turn left across from another driver who was trying to turn left but had their brights on, and I know this because they flashed them at me, this is not an invitation to a drag race. I would win? I don't know why all this bright flashing is necessary, specifically you all better pray those aren't LED headlights because there's a special place in hell for the development and rollout of those, at least if you've got your brights on at the wrong time you're severely confused or just real mad. I've been there - the first month I had my car, I was doing the mile drive between my parents house to practice with my brights on because I didn't know how to turn them off. Not my best moment. Sorry, Altadena. So, I can respect that once I get over the feeling of being blinded. But people who intentionally have their brights on? on the packed freeway? at 8am? you are my enemy and I invite you to meet me in the pit/behind cop denney's on ramirez st. all I want is a little sticker of an eyeball that signals I'm visually impaired and have issues with brightness, but is that possible? or visible? no, ironically. I'm so mad; I know that it's not reasonable but I'm mad.
